

Does anyone have an affordable solution for race radios? We've tried a chatter box with minimal success. Here is a web site I was considering...

<http://www.racingcommunications.com/radiosystems/index.html>

but just can't afford it. They do have good cheap helmets though

I have used radio & cell phone. Now use a dry erase board. It's simple, it works

Stan

There are quite a few options from Motorola that are quite affordable. I'd check into their website at motorola.com

Had one student cut out some pieces of white board with handles, but the crew chief didn't use them on the first heat of RA. The driver kept going and going and entered the pit too late. He was in first place over all, but was DQ'd. His quote was "I was waiting for someone to tell me to pit." The crew chief did send a member to the starting line area to wave his hands, but I guess that didn't work.