

I understand that the total cost of the vehicle cannot cost more than $3,300.

The question that I have is if you are dumpster-diving do those parts have to be included in the total cost?

Thanks. rhasler@kUSD.edu

Ron Haisler

Bradford High

Yes the value of the parts still needs to be included. Depending upon the age and condition of the part you can reduce the value according to your judgment. Just keep your estimation of the depreciation close to reality and you'll be OK

A price sheet is required in the log book?

If parts are completely manufactured, say for example the students cast a motor mounting plate instead of buying a ready-made one. Is the value equal to the store-bought one or the value of a pound of scrap aluminum?